Yiddish books have been collected at the master's center, more than 50,000, for a total of 1.3 million Yiddish-language works. Although it is not a national language, Yiddish is spoken in many areas of the United States. The drive is being led by the National Yiddish Book Center in Amherst, New York. The books are needed because Yiddish is in danger of extinction in the United States. The drive is part of the center's efforts to preserve Yiddish literature.
